Although the Atlas mower's battery can operate at a higher 80 volts, it's only rated for 4 amp-hours at full power. On the other hand, the Ego battery, at just 56V, is rated for 10 amp-hours. However, the Atlas mower can increase its run time by using a second battery, whereas the Ego mower doesn't offer that option.

THANKS for the review on the Atlas 80V Lawnmower. I just purchase one and charging the battery right now. I bought the standard charger also. It was raining heavily but now the sun is out. If I knew it took 2 hours to charge the battery I would have just got the rapid charger since I only have one battery.
