Tesla made several changes to its vehicle lineup on Thursday evening, seemingly aimed at driving demand in the fourth quarter of the year. The company increased the price of its Model Y Long Range in the U.S. to $48,990, up from the previous price of $48,490, a $500 US increase (via @Tslachan). The price increase - Tesla made several changes to its vehicle ...

Most UPS's work if you have Tesla reduce the max frequency when full and off-grid to 62.5hz. Most grid-tied solar inverters shut off before 62.5hz. I do not understand why Tesla doesn't make a software change to raise it to 62.5 and only raise it higher if the solar inverters are still producing power after 60 seconds.
